Minimize Risk ~ Maximize Life: Alcohol and Older Adults

Drinking is complicated. It's a normalized part of many social settings, from formal celebrations to simple evenings with family or friends. Yet, annually in the U.S., alcohol is responsible for nearly 180,000 deaths and innumerable health and safety problems. Because of physiological, mobility, and social changes inherent in aging, alcohol-related harms are often exacerbated. Despite the prevalence of alcohol consumption in our society, there is little to guide adults – especially older adults – in making informed choices about drinking.

This training will provide participants with practical understanding of alcohol use, based on current research, while answering questions like “Is drinking ok for me?” “If so, how much and how often?” Participants will also increase their skills to aid the older adults they work with make informed decisions about drinking, quality of life, health, and safety. The training provides research-based education on alcohol consumption with a common language for adults to use personally and professionally.

Presenter:

Jim Ryan, OCPC, ICPS is an Ohio Certified Prevention Consultant and Internationally Certified Prevention Specialist with over 40 years of experience in behavioral health and social services.
