PROFESSIONAL ORGANIZERS AND PRODUCTIVITY CONSULTANTS

- People who work in this field are very diverse: however, they generally charge an hourly fee and are insured. The national association’s website is www.napo.net, and the state association is www.napo-ohio.com. If there is a CPO beside the organizer’s name, it means they have undergone a certification process with this organization.

- There is another organization that specializes in more serious types of organizing challenges. It is called Institute for Challenging Disorganization (ICD). Its website is www.challengingsisorganization.org. The website has very helpful information to assist those struggling with organizing their spaces. One of the organizers listed on p. 7, Karen Kruzan of Twin Brooks Organizing certified by this organization.

- Among the types of activities that a professional organizer can do for someone is:
  - Hands-on organizing—one organizer or an entire organizing team can come to a home (or office) to organize the space and then advise a person on the best organizing tools and tactics for their specific challenges. They can also help people make decisions about what to keep, how to handle donations, recycling, and trash removal. The time investment can be anywhere from a few hours to many weeks, depending on the size of the space, the amount of clutter, and the person’s ability to make decisions.
  - Home maintenance—organizers can help create better organizing systems for relatively organized homes. Home maintenance could include an annual clean-out of the kitchen pantry or help with redesigning the home’s garage and storage areas. Organizers can communicate a person’s needs with the rest of the household to streamline communication and reduce friction.
  - Moving, relocating, and downsizing—Some professional organizers specialize in moves and relocations. They’ll help to manage everything from interviewing moving companies to packing, unpacking and organizing all of the household belongings.

ESTATE SALE & AUCTION COMPANIES

- These are companies that will sell items from the home. Some companies will price and auction individual items; and some companies will arrange an estate sale at the home. Some companies specialize in particular items or geographic areas.
- Most companies will charge a set percentage (ex: 20%-40%) for each sale. The percentage does vary by location, and the type of items being sold.

Common tasks of a company are:
- Sift through all the items in the home, including closets, garages, attic, and cabinets to ensure all salable items are accounted for.
- Organize and stage each item and piece of furniture in the home in order to make them more desirable.
- Research and price each item at the highest value possible.
- Photograph and market the sale online.
- Staff the sale with individuals on the days of the sale.
